

En route for San Maxime.

La Bate des Angles - Les Hôtels.

After a lazy day on Sunday & yesterday morning sunbathing on the "plage" at Nice, & after a lovely trip by boat up the coast to Monaco yesterday afternoon when we visited the Prince's Palace, we are now taking the coast road for San Maxime, where we hope to round off our holiday by sunning & lazing on the sands. Nice is an enormous town & the Promenade des Angles which you see here seems to stretch for about a mile, flanked on one side by expensive hotels. The beach itself is narrow and pebbly & the slope very steep, so bathing is not good. But there are quaint old parts & a big port where one of H.M. Minesweepers was in filling the town with sailors clad in tropical white. We rose early this morning & had a lovely ride; we have gone through Cannes, & also Juan-les-Pins - an attractive small place where the beach was full of children. We lunched & bathed at another small place called Napoule. Many thanks for your 3 letters & I card. If you want to write again - we shall be at Hotel Montheau - Lafayette 4 Rue Ribouille, Paris, next Saturday. We were very interested in all the news & hope you are having a lovely holiday. Love from M & J.
